to this issue. When we found out last June that Yahoo was reviving Community—the brilliant sitcom chosen by our readers to grace the cover of our "Fan Favorites" issue in 2011—for a 13-episode sixth season, we immediately looked into securing an exclusive. Show creator Dan Harmon responded with unprecedented access to the set, writers' room, and editing suite. Then, we thought, why not ask Joel McHale, who stars as discredited lawyer-turnedcampus cutup Jeff Winger, to guest edit what we dubbed "The Funny Issue"? We didn't require him to pore over every word in every layout, but we did invite him to pitch story ideas; show us how his other show, The Soup, gets made; interview Will

When I ran into McHale over the summer at San Diego's Comic-Con—where he was appearing on a Community panel moderated by executive editor Michael Schneider, who also wrote this issue's in-depth cover story—I told him that my 7-year-old daughter loves watching him on The Soup. He seemed genuinely flattered but also mildly disturbed that I'd expose someone so young to his Kardashian sex jokes.

Remembering Leonard Nimoy...Meet Seth Morris, sitcoms' go-to guy...

The TV Academy upends the nominations process (again!) by announcing big new changes.

BY MICHAEL SCHNEIDER

NETWORKS, STU-DIOS, and producers were already planning campaigns for this year's Emmys

when several new guidelines, announced in late February, sent them scrambling.

While the TV Academy often tweaks the rules, this year's biggest change affects the top categories, narrowing the definition of comedy and drama series. Until now, producers of shows that blend the genres—such as Orange Is the New Black and Shameless—could choose which category to compete in. Most have picked comedy, considered less competitive, which has led to accusations of gaming the system. In response, the Television Academy will now designate half-hour shows as comedies and hour-long shows as dramas (as well as expand the number of nominees for best series from six to seven).

Also, miniseries will be replaced by "limited series," defined as programs that tell a complete story and will not feature the same main characters in subsequent seasons (such as American Horror Story, True Detective, and Fargo). "I applaud [the Academy] for saying, "We need to adapt," "says Fargo executive producer Warren Littlefield, whose show won outstanding miniseries last year. "This is a step in that direction."

In light of the changes, here are some questions worth asking.

Why is running time now determining category?

When Nurse Jackie's Edie Falco won 2010's Outstanding Actress in a Comedy, even she seemed apologetic. "Ridiculous," she said while accepting the statuette. "I'm not funny!"

The debate over which category is appropriate for dramatic comedies (or comedic dramas) like Nurse Jackie, Orange Is the New Black, and Desperate Housewives has dragged on for years. Producers of traditional half-hour sitcoms grumble that dramedies aren't ha-ha funny and shouldn't compete against the likes of Modern Family and The Big Bang Theory. But these shows aren't as dramatic as, say, Mad Men and Game of Thrones, either. "There is a whole range of new programs that defy categorization," says Ben Silverman, executive producer of the hour-long

Jane the Virgin. "[Jane] is a great show in any genre, but it has a lot of comedy driving it. If you had to put it in any category, that would be the one."

Jane star Gina Rodriguez recently won a Golden Globe for best actress in a TV comedy/musical. But per the new Emmy rule, she'd be eligible only as an actress in a drama. To address this kind of discrepancy, the TV Academy has created a committee that producers can petition to change a category. Shows like Jane and Orange are expected to argue a move back to comedy (where Orange competed last year).

"The board of governors passed the 30-minute/60-minute rule knowing full well that it wasn't applicable to all comedies and dramas and dramedies," says John Leverence, the TV Academy's senior vice president of awards. "But the appeal clause was a place to start."

Coincidentally, Orange executive producer Jenji Kohan expressed a similar idea to us last year. "I wish there was an hour-long category and a half-hour category," she said, suggesting dropping "comedy" and "drama" classifications altogether. "I wish everyone wasn't so desperate to label things."

So what's the difference between limited and regular series? The emergence of shows like Fargo and True Detective, which rotate casts and storylines each season, happened so fast it took the Academy a while to figure out how to handle them. When American Horror Story premiered four years ago, executive producer Ryan Murphy successfully petitioned to compete as a miniseries rather than a drama since each season is selfcontained. Until now, the TV Academy has followed the Writers Guild of America rule in defining a regular series as any show with a "created by" credit (miniseries are often credited with "story by").

That meant that last year Fargo got permission to compete as a miniseries, while True Detective could be entered as a drama. Neither show will be in the 2015 race-their second seasons won't air during the eligibility period-but under the new guidelines, both are considered limited series (keeping them away from dramas like Homeland or House of Cards). Fargo's Littlefield is happy with the change. "We developed the show as a limited series," he says. "That's how we approached any award consideration. Having some of that clarity is very good."

What's the deal with having two variety categories? The variety series category is now split into Outstanding Variety Talk and Outstanding Variety Sketch, a way to finally acknowledge the explosion of sketch-comedy programs. The likes of The Daily Show and The Colbert Report have dominated the awards for years, but now such series as Portlandia and Key & Peele will have a chance to win, "The Board of Governors was aware that for the last two years there were 14 or more sketch and 14 or more talk shows [vying for] variety series nominations," Leverence says.

Will networks now try to convince employees to vote as a block? The final-round voting is now open to all those who voted in the nomination round (winners used to be decided by a secret committee of judges), so some producers worry about groups from certain shows agreeing to vote for the same nominees. Leverence says the academy will monitor such moves. "Whenever a voting pool is expanded and refreshed, there is a possibility that the outcome will be affected," he says, noting that voters must sign affidavits attesting to their compliance with the rules.

ou may not know his name—yet but Seth Morris has spent the past year making his presence known on TV's buzziest comedies, including Brooklyn Nine-Nine, Workaholics, and The Hotwives of Orlando. "I had no idea it was going to happen at once," Morris says. "People I've worked with like working with me."

The actor, 44, began his career in the late '90s, taking improv classes at New York's Upright Citizens Brigade Theatre, where he met Rob Corddry, Paul Scheer, and Rob Huebel. "Corddry and I didn't like each other at first because we were both like. 'F---. that guy's the funniest in the class," Morris says. "But you have to work well with others. Improv is a collaborative thing."

Morris made his first TV appearances on Late Night With Conan O'Brien, playing characters like Abraham Lincoln, Uncle Sam, and Death. "I also got to dance naked on Ted Danson," he says with a laugh. "I don't remember what the bit was, but it resulted in us running out and grinding on him, and that was really fun."

Here, Morris reflects on some highlights from his big year. —Rob Moynihan

KROLL SHOW Morris calls Bob Ducca, his hypochondriac character, "one of the roles I put the least amount of effort into because it's just so silly, but it's what people seem to like the most."

MARON "In this alternative comedy world, everyone's a nerd," Morris says of appearing on Marc Maron's IFC series. "My goal is to keep working with friends and good people."

▲ THE LEAGUE Morris is unsure if his character, Bill, will return for the fantasy football comedy's final season. "They're really good about bringing people back, so my fingers are crossed, because that's a really fun show."

TV's oddest couple may be Jack McBrayer and Triumph the Insult Comic Dog (voiced by writer-comedian Robert Smigel). A joint 2012 appearance on Conan led to their new sitcom on Cartoon Network's Adult Swim block, which features McBraver as a former child star now living with his TV mom (June Squibb). His life gets complicated when his former costar, Triumph, returns. McBrayer tells us why Jack and Triumph is a good series...and not just to poop on. —Michael Schneider

I have time to watch one more show. Why should it be yours? After a hard week, don't you owe it to yourself to go to bed angry?

Who should be watching? The parents of the 13-year-old boys and stoned college kids who are already watching. Let's make it family viewing!

What's the best thing anyone has said or written about your show? "Jack McBrayer seems so lifelike."

-AdultSwim.com

What's the worst thing? "Are you still in touch with Tina Fey?" -Betty McBrayer

Who was right? I guess Adult Swim, 'cause Tina Fey will not return my calls. Give us an equation for your show.

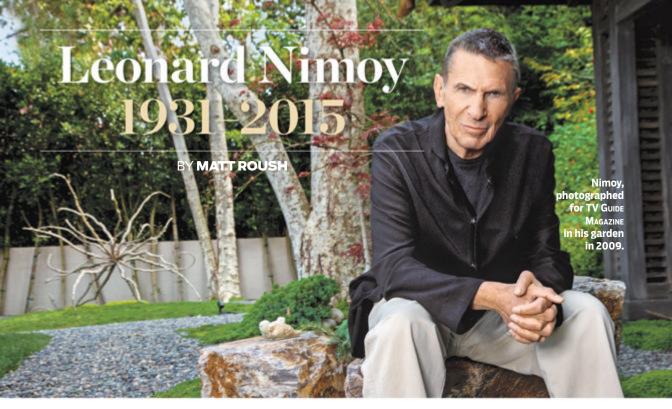

ALF x 1/4 ALF's drug use + Ted - the star power ÷ by Lassie x The Odd Couple. Remainder four.

Which show would you like to poop on? Downton Abbey thinks they're pretty great.

With which show would you like to do a crossover? Game of Thrones! I'm sure Triumph and I would get Red Weddinged in the first five minutes.

t doesn't seem logical. The man who brought the immortal Mr. Spock to life, transforming what could have been a pointy-eared camp icon into an admired paragon of otherworldly wisdom and, yes, humanity, died February 27 at age 83 of end-stage chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. As Leonard Nimoy lived long, pop culture prospered—as did Star Trek, the classic sci-fi series that made him famous.

Often described as the conscience of Star Trek, his character's impact carried far beyond the original show's abbreviated three-season run on NBC in the late 1960s. Trek flourished in syndication, which led to a series of TV spinoffs and feature films. All were imbued with the ultimately optimistic vision of Trek creator Gene Roddenberry, who once said of Spock: "We're all aliens on this strange planet.

So people find identification with Spock."

Nimoy's portrayal of the half-human, half-Vulcan science officer belied the cheesier aspects of traditional space operas by adding an aura of nuanced mystery and unassailable dignity-despite those ears. "I don't want to play a creature or a computer," the actor told us in 1967. "Spock gives me a chance to say some things about the human race." The character's often-repressed empathetic side made him more fascinating than the average alien, and there's no denying the sincerity of his bromance with Capt. James T. Kirk (William Shatner).

Few shows, characters, or stars have had a more robust existence after premature cancellation. Nimoy would continue in the role, which earned him three Emmy nominations, when Star Trek was revived for the big screen in 1979, with five original-cast sequels to follow (he directed two of them). He was back as Spock in two episodes of Star Trek: The Next Generation, inspiring the writers of J.J. Abrams's 2009 feature-film reboot to woo him to play Spock Prime to Zachary Ouinto's younger version. And Abrams lured him back to TV as the sinister William Bell in Fox's dark fantasy Fringe.

The modern embodiment of Spock can be found in Jim Parsons's Emmy-honored portrayal of The Big Bang Theory's emotionally robotic genius Sheldon Cooper, who in a memorable 2008 Christmas episode is brought to tears when Penny gifts him with a napkin signed by his idol Nimoy (who would later voice a Spock action figure on the series).

There was more to Nimoy than Spock, of course. He wrote memoirs—one titled I Am Not Spock, the other I Am Spock, reflecting his ambivalence and ultimate acceptance of the role—as well as books of poetry. He was an avid photographer, and as a film director, he had a major comedy hit with Three Men and a Baby. (Less successful were his occasional forays into music.) He lent his sonorous voice to animated films and documentaries and was the narrator of A&E's Ancient Mysteries.

Nimoy's final message on Twitter, posted four days before his death, reads, "A life is like a garden. Perfect moments can be had, but not preserved, except in memory." Thanks to the powerfully enigmatic presence he projected for decades as Spock, our memories of Nimoy are unlikely ever to fade. As long as there are new frontiers to explore, we'll always need a Mr. Spock.

Nimoy appeared on many TV Guide zine covers. Here are the first three.

akes sense that the undead would have especially acute existential misgivings. "Zombies—I've heard we're finito. Is that true? Has oversaturation buried us?" muses Blaine (David Anders), a pastyfaced ghoul who knows better. After all, he's the one responsible for turning type-A med student Liv Moore (Rose McIver), hero of the delightfully quirky iZombie, into a brain-craving member of "Team Z."

Thanks to The Walking Dead, zombies have never been hotter. But unlike that show's shambling, inchoate monsters, the reanimated characters in iZombie and The Returned, an artfully engrossing remake of a French movie-turned-series about the dead mysteriously returning to life, are deeply human and often hyperverbal.

"I have no idea who I am anymore," frets Liv as she adjusts to a not-quite-dead life of "posttraumatic ennui" with a chalky complexion, a puzzled ex-fiancé, and a hunger for brains—which she satisfies by taking a job in a morgue, where (in a twist reminiscent of Pushing Daisies) she ingests victims' memories along with their gray matter and helps solve crimes by pretending to be a psychic.

As deadpan as it is high-concept, iZombie (based on a comic book) is a genre-bending and beguiling hoot, a far cry from the somber, eerie moodiness of The Returned, a faithful and well-cast adaptation of the acclaimed French series Les Revenants (shown on SundanceTV in 2013).

In the A&E series, a fog-shrouded mountain town is rocked by the inexplicable arrival of loved ones from beyond the grave who have no idea where they've been or why they're back. "So what am I then?" wonders teenage Camille (India Ennenga). "You're a miracle," insists Peter (Jeremy Sisto), a psychologist with his hands full while his neighbors grapple with grief, guilt, hope, and fear of the unknown as more seemingly supernatural events assail the community. Long live this new wave of zombies, promising that life after death can be unusually fascinating.

iZombie ★★★★☆ The Returned ★★★★☆

IT'S AN EARLY January afternoon, and the cast of Community has gathered on the show's cafeteria set to meet the woman who saved Greendale Community College.

This is the first time that Kathy Savitt, chief marketing officer and head of media at Yahoo, is sitting down with star Joel McHale and Co., and she has a lot to share. Savitt details Yahoo's plans for the show: Community trailers in movie theaters, a pricey Emmy campaign, a premiere party at Austin's South by Southwest festival, an active presence on Tumblr (the blogging platform that Yahoo owns), and more.

Ten minutes into her spiel, Savitt realizes she's not getting much of a reaction. She pauses. She's thinking, Does that all sound OK?

Ken Jeong, who plays eccentric student/ school employee Ben Chang, finally pipes up: "No one's ever talked to us this way!"

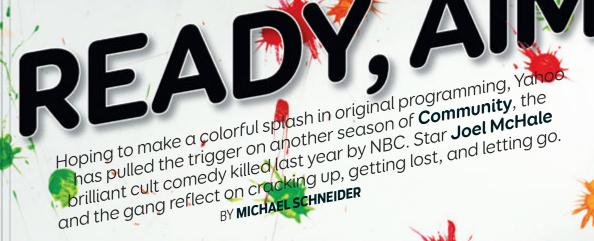

A few weeks later, back on set, Jeong says he's still stunned by the show's reversal of fortune. "I'm not used to the kind of love we're getting this year," he says. "It's been so surreal and sublime to be in a position where we all saw the ax coming, and then a few months later to be able to tell Kathy, 'We want this.'"

One of the most unconventional series ever to hit primetime, Community always struggled for acceptance at NBC, where it debuted in 2009. Initially pitched as a comedy about strangers who bond in a community-college study group, the show quickly became an experiment in deconstructing the sitcom form. Created by iconoclast Dan Harmon, Community earned critical acclaim and a loyal (if small) fan base by parodying TV tropes and making meta jokes about pop culture.

Viewers fell in love with the show's quirky characters, but by Season 3, executives from NBC and Sony Pictures Television, the studio behind the show, felt it wasn't commercial enough to garner mainstream success and had grown tired of clashing with Harmon. Harmon was fired, and new executive producers were brought in.

Ironically, the new showrunners essentially tried to emulate Harmon's Community blueprint, and the show failed to broaden its base. McHale lobbied hard to bring back Harmon and fellow executive producer Chris

McKenna, and in an extraordinary move, the two were rehired. But by the end of Season 5, it was clear that NBC had had enough of Community's shenanigans. Even though the show averaged a 1.5 rating among adults 18–49, a decent number nowadays, the network was ready to cut it loose. "If you look at our ratings, they were pretty darn good," McHale says. "But it was always, 'Well, you'd be lucky to get picked up.' We were [in flux] until they eventually canceled us. That was a great day. Fun day. That's sarcasm, folks."

Alison Brie, who plays bright-eyed student Annie Edison, says it was tough to schedule her career around a show that was forever on the bubble, unclear whether it'd be renewed or canceled. "It sucks," she says. "Every year we would be on hiatus, it was stressful trying to do other work. But the show always came back."

Until it didn't. After NBC canceled Community last May, Sony attempted to set it up at Crackle (the streaming site it owns) or Hulu (which holds the series' syndication rights). Neither deal worked out, and it looked as though the doors to Community might get locked for good. "We all moved on," says McHale, whose Jeff Winger, a lawyer turned student, led the charge to save Greendale last season when Subway tried to turn it into a university devoted to sandwich making. "There was a long period between cancellation and Yahoo buying it. We all started conversations with other networks [about other shows]. It's not like my kid's finger got chopped off or someone died. But artistically, it was a real bummer."

Gillian Jacobs, who plays misinformed psychology major Britta Perry, says she was told by many that the show was dead and never coming back. "I started to move on,"

she says, "because otherwise you're just a Miss Havisham character, holding on."

To mark the end, the cast gathered last June at a Los Angeles restaurant for a goodbye meal. "We had planned the dinner and thought, 'It's either going to be a celebration or a wake," McHale says. Danny Pudi, who plays the socially awkward Abed Nadir, says the gathering ended up being a bit mournful: "We all got drunk, cried a little bit, laughed a lot."

But Sony Pictures Television doesn't give up easily. The company recently resurrected Unforgettable at A&E after the show had been dropped by CBS—just the latest in a long line of programs it has revived elsewhere. "People perceive there's so much animosity between Dan Harmon and us," studio president Steve Mosko says. "Sometimes business is like sports, where there's a lot of back and forth. But one thing we all have in common is we want the show to continue. How we get there is sometimes a little bumpy, but that's the way it works."

Harmon says he's figured out how to work with the studio and was thrilled that, in an email leaked during the recent Sony hacking case, someone at the company praised the show. "Sony is a gigantic corporation that is good at certain things that others are not—like keeping shows alive," he says. "Even when deep down they loathe the people who created the shows, they pump it with formaldehyde; they defibrillate it."

But Harmon had also made peace with NBC's decision. He was ready to return if Hulu was attached ("They bought my house," he says, alluding to the syndication dollars), but he was skeptical of Yahoo's interest. "I immediately said, 'No way, that's ridiculous,'" he says. "I had never heard the word Yahoo in association with television before." His opinion changed when Savitt called and he couldn't detect a hidden agenda. "There was no way I could say no to this person," he says. "I would have spent the rest of my life wondering, 'What if I had joined forces with her?' She might have a moon colony at some point. If I do a good enough show, maybe we get extra oxygen."

For Yahoo, Community is the first offering in a new slate of original programming: Bridesmaids director Paul Feig is behind Other Space, a comedy about misfit space travelers, while Smallville's Mike Tollin is executive producing Sin City Saints, a comedy about a Las Vegas basketball team. The plan is part of a larger strategy for its free Yahoo Screen streaming service. The company, which produces video content for its digital magazines covering food, finance, travel, and other topics, also has a deal with Live Nation to air live concerts every day. "Community is a great opportunity for viewers who come for one show to sample our others," Savitt

There was a long period between cancellation and Yahoo buying Community. It's not like my kid's finger got chopped off or someone died. But artistically, it was a real bummer." -JOEL McHALE says. Season 6 launches on March 17 with two episodes; additional installments will be rolled out one per week. Yahoo's deal for a 13-episode season will even allow for shows longer than the broadcast-standard 211/2 minutes. "They can breathe a bit," McHale says.

The pact was signed just hours before the stars' contractual obligations were set to expire. "I was kept in the loop by Sony, but that's because I would badger them," McHale says. "We were all asked, 'If this thing happened, do you guys want to do it?" "Once Harmon was on board, he had to convince his fellow executive producer to return. "It was time to move on," McKenna says of the cancellation. "I told Dan I have a newborn, I just got hired to write a feature, and Universal wants me to develop a pilot. But Dan promised to be my Lamaze coach. It's all I needed to hear."

Savitt is making good on her promises so far. McHale marvels at the attention, which includes Community's first large-scale promo shoot since its debut season. "We knew it was different right then," he says, "because they were already spending money, and they were giddy."

The cast members agree they won't miss waking up on Friday mornings to see the ratings. Like Netflix and Amazon, Yahoo has no plans to reveal how many people are watching-at least initially. "You may find that we had more viewers than previously counted, because I think the Nielsen system is heavily stacked against a show like Community," Jacobs says. "Kids watching us in their dorm rooms at 2am may now for the first time be counted." McHale's expectations are a tad higher: "I think it's going to be [streamed], like, a billion times."

The freedom Yahoo offers may be too much for Harmon and McKenna. Without NBC's standards and practices deciding what's appropriate, the showrunners are policing themselves to make sure themes don't become too adult. As for language, Harmon admits to "loosening the corset." Some network-banned words will now make it onto Community, including Jesus as an exclamation. "I always found it odd that people couldn't utter that word," Harmon says. "It's so primal and not profane."

COMMUNITY DIDN'T JUST move to Yahoo. It physically relocated to the San Fernando Valley after NBC's Marry Me took over its space at the Paramount lot in Hollywood. The show's new facilities, in a former parking garage at the CBS Studio Center, are much larger than the old digs, which has allowed the producers to build additional sets, including a pub. But it's been hard on the actors, who have had to learn a different Greendale floor plan. "Just a week ago, I realized there was a much quicker path to Annie and Abed's apartment," Brie says. "Danny still gets lost every day. He has to have someone holding his hand to bring him to set."

Community's space is so big, Harmon has started tooling around on a Segway. "What surprises you anymore?" Pudi says, laughing. "Dan Harmon rides the Segway around the cafeteria, because he can!"

The show is also stretching beyond the stage, filming more outdoors—including a trip back to Los Angeles City College, where the pilot was filmed. "We've seen natural light for the first time in four years," Brie says. "We can go shoot on a street that looks like a street!"

For viewers, the departure of two cast members (following Chevy Chase and Donald Glover's earlier exits) may be Season 6's most jarring change: Yvette Nicole Brown (sweet Shirley Bennett, the show's moral center) left to care for her ailing father and has gone on to The Odd Couple (see page 47), and Jonathan Banks

HOW TO WATCH SEASON 6 ON YAHOO SCREEN

By K.P. Anderson and Joel McHale

1. People over 40, accept that this is what the world has become. The network and cable TV you know is a dying beast infested with nothing but crime-procedural reruns and stupid clip shows.

2. People under 40, go upstairs and ask your parents for $700. You don't need it to get Yahoo Screen, but now seems like a good time to find out if they're tired of your s--t.

3. Take a lover and use him/her for the Internetenabled TV, Xbox 360, Roku, Apple TV, or Google Chromecast.

3b. OK, write this down: We know it's written down here, but write it down again. This is important, and there's no way you'll ever remember....

- Turn on one of your smart-TV platforms (Xbox 360, Roku, Apple TV, Google Chromecast).
- Find the icon that says "Yahoo Screen."
- Select it, and start watching Season 6 of Community.

4a. Take a nap.

- 4b. Then log on to screen.yahoo.com and click on Community.
- 5. Write a letter to NBC and tell them what you just did.

Paget Brewster and Keith David are two of Season 6's new additions. Brewster (who guest starred as a different character last season) plays Frankie Dart, a problem solver who shows up in the premiere to put Greendale's finances in order. "She might be a metaphor for Yahoo," Harmon admits, "in the sense that she's an unprecedentedly professional presence in this asylum."

But Frankie's plans don't sit well with some of the gang. "I start cutting things that the students and Jeff want to keep, and it upsets Jeff," Brewster says. "They discover that, without Shirley, there's a lack of a voice of reason. They're crazed animals. Frankie's good at what she does but ends up having to be a jerk to do her job."

David is introduced in the second episode as Elroy Patashnik, a washed-up inventor who comes to Greendale in search of redemption. "I'm the guy who did all the wonderful ideas that didn't pan out," David says. "I feel I understand something about being a dinosaur."

Jim Rash (flamboyant Dean Craig Pelton) and Nat Faxon directed the episode, which also finds the dean stuck in one of Elroy's virtual-reality contraptions. "That was nerve-racking," Rash says of his first time helming a Community episode. "Even though you're in a very safe environment, it's still Dan's words and the writers' vision. The actors couldn't have been nicer—although," he adds with a laugh, "Joel is a little hard to direct."

IT'S A RARE rainy February afternoon in Los Angeles, which fits the mood inside the Community writers' room. The staff is struggling to map out a story about Chang leaving Greendale behind after becoming a minor national celebrity. Abed had been making a film featuring Chang, and after realizing they can use that footage to capitalize on his fame, the other study-group members conjure up a plan to turn the footage into a new movie, leading Abed to lose control of the project. But the writers can't figure out what's motivating Abed to play along.

Harmon pitches idea after idea. Just like Abed, who traffics in pop-culture minutiae, he peppers every example with a reference, citing, in the course of an hour, Ed Wood, Brewster's Millions, Bob and Doug McKenzie, Major League, Rocky Balboa running up the steps in Philadelphia, and Fonzie. "Breaking stories gets harder each year," he says, noting the difficulty in keeping characters "this familiar going through experiences that challenge them every week." He decides to sleep on it and cracks the idea the next day. The episode is probably the most ambitious in a season that is mostly back to basics. "We have been doing a season that is very much a sitcom set in a community college," Harmon says. "It's character-driven."

On set a week later, it's clear the episode is also a comment on Community itself, as Abed and Jeff candidly discuss their fear of being left standing alone as everyone around them departs. "Jeff is in a crisis this year," McHale says. "He's got some big questions about this school and losing people in this life. He's brought these people in, and now what is going to happen? He's dealing with how he's opened his heart, and he might experience loss."

This season's guest stars will include Steve Guttenberg and Billy Zane, and some familiar faces may even be back. Harmon is coy when asked about Chase's claim that he was invited to make an appearance as the (now deceased) curmudgeon Pierce Hawthorne: "All I'll say is, if Chevy was approached about doing a cameo for Season 6 and he did spill it on Reddit, then he deserves everyone accusing him of being insane." The possible return of Glover (who played jock Troy Barnes and left to pursue a music career) is a more sensitive subject. "That's too painful," Harmon says. "I just want him to come back. I'll talk to him on the phone about life and stuff, but I don't want to be the guy he stops calling, so I don't push it."

At this point, after the ups and downs, the producers and stars joke that the show will never leave them-they will have to leave Community. But the actors' six-year deals are up after this year, and if there's a seventh season, it's likely that several more of them will depart. Among the busy troupe, Jacobs is starring in Judd Apatow's Netflix series Love; Jeong has the semiautobiographical comedy pilot Dr. Ken set up at ABC; Pudi will return to NBC for the horror-comedy pilot Strange Calls; and Rash, who won an Oscar with Faxon in 2012 for the script of The Descendants, is writing and directing more features.

Harmon has two ways of looking at it. "One," he says,

"is we have been pared down to the absolute minimum. If Alison is unavailable for an extra hour a week, our show deflates like a balloon. The other way is the show itself is about people in transition. Is there such a thing as a bad version of Community if the entire cast leaves and we audition new people and do some strange Law & Order spinoff using the same sets and sensibility?"

Hopefully, fans won't have to find out. McHale, who still hosts the weekly pop-culture clip show The Soup on E! (see page 28) and is developing shows, says he's game to continue. "We are a fungus that is very hard to remove," he says. Jeong agrees: "I can't quit the show. I still have more to learn, more to evolve. If all I had to do was Community for the rest of my life, that would be heavenly."

That will be up to Yahoo. "We will be transparent with our advertising partners and share numbers at some point," Savitt says. Yahoo will also look at how Community performs in social media and whether it drives users to other Yahoo content.

If Community does go on, Harmon says he won't ever be able to leave: "After being the guy who wasn't supposed to have a show, the guy whose show was supposed to be canceled, the guy who got fired from his own show, and then the guy who got rehired, I'm the only thing that can go wrong. I can't be a rebel anymore. I'm going to be the last one here."

Survival of the

The Last Man on Earth star Will Forte opens up about living with Val Kilmer, giving his beard the smell test, and breaking stuff.

BY JOEL McHALE

So I've thought a lot about these questions. When you were asked to play the voice of Batman in The Lego Movie, how thrilled were you? Actually, I played Abraham Lincoln in that movie! So you're starting off from a place of lack of information, and I'm hoping your questions get better.

OK, here's one: Did Val Kilmer really live in your house during the filming of MacGruber? It was after MacGruber. He was moving and he was going to be in between places for what I thought was a couple of days, so he said, "Can I stay with you while I figure things out?" It ended up being three months, and it was the best three months of my life. To get to be roommates with Val Kilmer was something I wish everybody could experience. It's pretty crazy. When you watch Top Gun, you never think, "That guy's going to be my roommate one day." I kept thinking back to The Doors. One morning he was sitting at the dining room table, listening to music on his computer. I came in and was doing stuff on the other side of the table and the Doors song "L.A. Woman" came on, so we just started singing "L.A. Woman" together. It was a real crazy moment of "Oh my God, the 20-year-old Will Forte would never believe this." Actually, the 42-year-old Will Forte wasn't believing it.

In your new show, The Last Man on Earth, you play literally the last man on Earth after a deadly virus hits. This show is my favorite comedy of the past few years by 10 miles. No joke. It just filled me with rage and jealousy because it's so perfect. [Laughs] Thank you so much. That's the best compliment you can hear, because I feel that all the time toward other people, so I'm happy somebody is dealing that my way for once.

I know that everyone is talking about your beard. Is that all real? Because if it is, then I am not a real man. It's 100 percent real. I never knew I had it in me. We discussed doing a fake beard, but fake beards just suck. You've got a ton of glue all over your face, and the glue starts coming off. It was so much easier to just do the real thing. But it was a real facial adventure. It took about six months to give it its full heft, and not a lot of people would get that experience—to live life for a while with that monstrosity on their face. Have you ever had a full beard?

I had a full beard for a play. I needed to use shampoo because it would smell. It was horrifying. Oh yeah. Mine got to the length where I could do a smell check because I could lift it up to my nose. It's so hard to eat, and you have to have friends around you at all times to let you know when you've got a bunch of crap in your beard.

Are you going to trim it now? Something happens in the show at some point that leads me to get rid of my beard. I don't want to say more than that.

I'm going to assume it's because you burped a lot. [Laughs] Yes, exactly. We knew that spoilers would come out!

And your costar Kristen Schaal—she's horrible to work with, right? As a person and as an actor, she is the worst.

OK, I just wanted to confirm that. And her performance is poor. It's rough. Yes. It's going to get a lot of people talking about how bad she is. [Laughs] No, everything is the exact opposite, Joel. She is dynamite. She's so funny and so good and just the best, most delightful person to be working with every day. She's magical.

But she had no nice things to say about you. Well, I was very hard on her. I play the tough-love game.

There is that male fantasy of "If I could just do anything I wanted all the time" that you're capitalizing on greatly in this show. We have several women on our writing staff, and it's interesting to hear the male and female versions of what you would do if you were the last person on Earth. Women wouldn't break much stuff. They would go to a luxury spa or a chardonnay factory. What's the first thing you would do?

People call me Will Arnett all the time, but I don't think they actually think I'm Will Arnett. They say something nice, then they call me Will Arnett, and that's totally fine.

-WILL FORTE

I would eat everything I could find. I would break into a Ferrari dealership. I would do what you did with those two cars in the premiere: smash them together to blow them up. And then eventually, I would spend a month trying to do the same thing with two freight trains. Oh my God, I never thought about that! That's good, because in case we were ever to get a second season, we could catalog things that we didn't think of for the first. But the train thing we could never make happen, because that's a little out of our budget. Just the simple way you don't open doors on the show but instead shoot them with a gun is so fun. That is exactly what I would do. Yeah, and there'd probably be a lot more shooting if it was actually me, too. There's something about breaking windows that is really, really fun. It's obviously frowned upon in society.

But there is no society, so who cares? There is no society anymore in this show, so he can do whatever the heck he wants to do. [Laughs]

Has Tim Allen contacted you thinking that you were remaking Last Man Standing? That is probably the most common thing I hear about the show: people getting it mixed up with Last Man Standing. My mom does that all the time.

Actually, people working on this show do that still. [Laughs] But if they think it's Last Man Standing and that's why they're tuning in, who cares, right? Yeah, as long as I know they're talking about the right show, I don't care what they call it. People call me Will Arnett all the time, and I don't think they actually think I'm Will Arnett. They say something nice, then they call me Will Arnett, and that's totally fine. I always thought you were Laurence Fishburne. I'll take that also. I'll take any of them.

That's What She Sai

With Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt, Tina Fey teams up with The Office's Ellie Kemper for a series that puts the cult in cult comedy.

BY DAMIAN HOLBROOK

HOLD OUR CALLS! The Office's adorable receptionist Ellie Kemper is back as the star of Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt, Netflix's delightfully demented comedy about a wide-eyed escapee from a doomsday cult who trades an underground bunker for life in New York City. Originally developed for NBC, Kimmy Schmidt—which debuts on the streaming service on Friday, March 6—is the brainchild of Tina Fey and fellow 30 Rock executive producer Robert Carlock, so it bears more than a slight resemblance to that award-winning sitcom. "It does have the pacing and tone of 30 Rock," Kemper says. "Those fast cutaways and quick jokes that you might even miss if you're not listening closely." Here, Fey and Kemper give more reasons to pay attention.

Where did the idea for this show originate?

Fey: We developed it with Ellie in mind. She is so all-American but also has that mix of innocence and strength. That led us to this idea, which is meant to be a heightened version of the "lady starting over in the big city" genre.

Kemper: I feel like I've played some characters that err on the side of ditzy, but Kimmy is not a ditz. She is clearly a survivor. Anything she doesn't know is based on the fact that she was kept underground for 15 years, not on a lack of intelligence.

Were you concerned about playing cults for laughs?

Fey: For sure. We don't want to be insensitive. I read a bunch of books about people who had survived things like this. And the thing that made us feel it would maybe be OK is that the show is about people who survive and how optimistic they are to continue. It's celebrating human nature and the incredible optimism people, women in particular, are capable of.

Kemper: I was worried, personally, about how I could play it without offending anyone. But I would calm myself down by remembering that Tina and Robert were in charge of writing the story, and obviously they have a proven track record, so my fears would be allayed.

Can we talk about Tituss Burgess? We already loved him as D'Fwan on 30 Rock, but here he really gets to break out as Kimmy's new roommate, Titus.

Kemper: I love him. During the pilot, we were taking selfies. Sometimes I wet my pants when I laugh too hard, and that happened with Tituss while I was sitting on his lap taking a selfie! I got up before [he noticed]—only if he reads this would he know. But I thought, "This is such a good sign." It's the mark of a truly good time if you wet your pants from laughing! [Laughs]

t was so nice to take out commercial breaks and the thing that says TV PG' in the corner." -TINA FEY

How did you feel about the move from NBC to Netflix?

Fey: We were having a somewhat disheartening scheduling meeting with NBC, who liked the show and understood that Ellie was adorable, but they were saying how they weren't having success launching comedies. So we opened the conversation of letting us talk to Netflix, and NBC was very supportive. That was a weird feeling, because I have worked for so long at NBC that it was like your husband saying you should see other people.

Kemper: We found out the day before our wrap party that there would be a second season. That was such a great reason to celebrate.

Did moving to Netflix alter the way you made the show? Kemper: People have asked if the tone might change in the second season now that there aren't network parameters, and I don't think it will. Robert and Tina like those boundaries. Fey: I started cutting in tons of male fullfrontal nudity. Basically every 10 seconds, there is a shot of someone's junk. [Laughs] The Netflix deal came down literally in the final week of shooting, so we'll see what the difference is when we start Season 2. But we were able to go back into the editing room and make things a little longer. It was so nice to take out commercial breaks and the thing that says "TV PG" in the corner. [Laughs]

Do you now get free Netflix for life?

Fey: I don't know! I already had it.

Kemper: That's what I want to know! I'm a subscriber and keep getting emails from them...and I want to ask, "Hey, any way we can reverse the fees here?" [Laughs]

How The Soup Gets Made

Take one hilarious host, add a crackerjack writing team, lots of funny clips, and some game celebrity guests. Serve up a hearty bowl of comedy.

BY DAVID HOCHMAN

LIKE A GAGGLE of wannabe brides in poofy dresses tripping through mud on The Bachelor, The Soup offers an unending array of outrageous visuals. E!'s weekly recap of reality clips, talk show fails, and kitty vids is, after more than 10 years and 500 episodes, a sort of national archives of idiocy. The series itself has never been fresher. In fact, The Soup scored its first Emmy nomination last year and recently began airing live, so we spent a Friday inside the snark tank with the show's writers and longtime host—and guest editor—Joel McHale.

10:30am Clip Meeting With hundreds of TV channels and 300 hours of video uploaded to YouTube every minute, picking just 20-odd snippets for one episode is not easy. The Soup's 15 staffers start on Tuesdays and are googly-eyed by week's end. "People say pop culture's all junk," McHale says. "We take the best junk and show it to you." Today's final bracket: a stupid drunk guy on Alaska

State Troopers versus daffy Kelsey from The Bachelor. "OK, both are winners," McHale says. "This Kelsey girl has given us two weeks of gold!"

11:30am Argument Over Lunch "Being in Los Angeles, we have a ton of dietary needs to consider," executive producer K.P. Anderson says. "No carbs, gluten, gluten-free, paleo, vegan, raw...." What does McHale like to nosh on? "Drugs that were synthesized in Soviet-era Russia for the soldiers," he jokes.

4:30pm TelePrompTer Read-Through McHale dashes into the writers' room late after an afternoon shooting Community. Wearing a Sgt. Pepper's T-shirt, skinny jeans, and new sneakers, he flubs his way through the rough script featuring a joke about a woman with a lot of TV Guide Magazines on Hoarding: Buried Alive.

5:15pm VIP Arrivals Adam Scott, Gillian Jacobs, Clark Duke, and Rob Corddry are on hand to promote Hot Tub Time Machine 2, so producers shoot a dressing-room segment to post on Twitter. McHale enters and finds the stars sinisterly sharpening knives. Corddry is swinging a samurai sword. "Our guests are usually up for anything," says writer Lee Farber, citing the time show favorite Lou Diamond Phillips donned a curly blond wig and did something unprintable to a hobby horse.

6:15pm Rehearsal Less than an hour to air and the script is in shambles. A joke about chef Duff Goldman from Food Network's Duff Till Dawn keeps bombing, and Jacobs groans about screaming the word "fatty" after a clip from TLC's My Big Fat Fabulous Life. (They change it to "lady.") But thanks to a segment from the never-disappointing Maury in which a woman goes carpet-kickin' crazy over her boyfriend's DNA test, the script is finally sewn up. Bonus: Scott and Corddry do savage impressions of the bearded outliers on Discovery's Alaskan Bush People. "Is there actually a dude named 'Junk Man Kenny'?" Scott asks, in full Kenny mode.

6:40pm Final Touch-Ups McHale gets one last powder and downs a double macchiato, a ritual before each show.

6:50pm Preshow Jitters "We make fun of other TV shows. That's what we do," Anderson says while prepping the audience of around 75—a mix of tourists, college kids, and production pals. Since going live after this year's Super Bowl, The Soup has new momentum but also more preshow nerves. The sweat circles under Farber's arms get bigger by the second, and even McHale's face tightens as he polishes a last-minute Kim Kardashian joke. ("Kim recently revealed her favorite sex position. Not surprisingly, it's of course: on camera.") Celebrities occasionally get irked by McHale's barbs. "Mickey Rourke thought I made fun of his dead dog, but it was a tribute, I swear," McHale says. "Bruce Jenner hates my guts, but to date, not a single reality star has said, 'How dare you?'"

7:00pm Showtime McHale delivers his opening monologue in front of a green screen. He's wearing a tailored suit jacket and tie but keeps on his skinny jeans and sneakers. The Hot Tub Time Machine 2 gang gets huge laughs from the crowd, especially when Duke and McHale reenact a viral video of a cat knocking a glass off a table. After the show, fans and crew members shower the host with praise. Says McHale with a smile, "This is the best way to screw around and get paid."

VIRGIN TERRITORY

Deconstructing Jane the Virgin's sunny Miami set.

BY ORIANA SCHWINDT

IN A LANDSCAPE littered with gritty dramas, Jane the Virgin—the acclaimed Miami-set comedy—shines. Outrageous plots and raucous colors come together to create one wild nod to telenovelas. "It's a bright show and even brighter in spirit," executive producer Jennie Snyder Urman explains. To match that spirit, Urman and the production design team wanted to find "a way to do Miami that wasn't Miami Vice" and to visually reflect the very different worlds of working-class pregnant virgin Jane Villanueva (Gina Rodriguez) and her wealthy accidental baby daddy, Rafael Solano (Justin Baldoni).

The modest Villanueva house, particularly the living room, needed to convey the feeling of three generations of women—Jane, her mother (Andrea Navedo), and Jane's grandmother (Ivonne Coll)—living together. For the Marbella, the hotel Rafael co-owns, Urman says, "We wanted it to have a fairytale quality. But fairytale with a lowercase f—just a touch of fairy dust."

JANE THE VIRGIN, Mondays, 9/8c The CW

- 2. When it came time to create the hotel room's color scheme, Urman brought in a small, turquoise vase from her house for inspiration, and she forgot to bring it home. The vase found its way onto Rafael's shelf-until Urman noticed the familiar-looking piece. She asked set dressers to find a replacement so she could have her prized pot back.
- 3. Though Jane and Rafael come from different backgrounds, Urman used props to suggest a subtle connection between the characters. One example: Jane has a single yellow flower in her room, while Rafael has a vaseful.
- 4. Despite the Villanuevas' love of Spanish-language soap operas, Urman says it wouldn't make sense for the family to have a big flat-screen TV in their living room; it's just not the kind of item the y would splurge on. So the design team found an older monitor at a Hollywood prop house.
- 5. The worn blanket that adorns the back of the Villanuevas' couch looks like one you'd pull out of your grandmother's linen closet—which is exactly the point. "You imagine that [Jane's grandmother] Alba made it long ago," Urman savs.

2. Empire

Wednesday, March 18, 8/7c, Fox

Who wouldn't want to be a part of the happiest surprise hit of the new TV year? As the first season of the deliciously soapy musical melodrama comes to a too-soon close, the two-hour finale features guest appearances by Snoop Dogg, Jennifer Hudson, Rita Ora, Juicy J, and Charles Hamilton, all providing a tuneful backdrop to the main event: Taraji P. Henson's joyfully scene-stealing performance as Cookie Lyon, a ferocious, campy lioness at the center of many family intrigues.

3. Bloodline Friday, March 20, Netflix

The producers of Damages concoct an intriguing 13-episode saga with a sultry Florida Keys setting. Unhappy tidings await a prominent family (including sibs Kyle Chandler and Linda Cardellini) rattled by the return of a dissolute bad-seed brother (Ben Mendelsohn).

We are now seriously creeped out by the smothvolatile mom, Norma (Vera Farmiga), as the third season of this deranged origin story gets under

4. Banshee

Friday, March 13, 10/9c, Cinemax

The operatic carnage being perpetrated by Sheriff Lucas Hood (Antony Starr) and cronies in the Season 3 finale is on a grand Game of Thrones scale. And not just because an ancient sword is part of the bloody action as multiple showdowns swell the body count even higher than usual.

Dancing With the Stars

Season premiere, Monday March 16, 8/7c, ABC

The new cast once again stretches the definition of "star," but it's fun watching unexpected faves emerge while rooting for pop icons like Patti LaBelle and Suzanne Somers.

6. The Good Wife Sunday, March 15, 9/8c, CBS

As Frank Prady, Alicia's formidable opponent in the state's attorney race, David Hyde Pierce has been a great addition this season, and Frank's now playing dirty by attacking her husband's reputation. The terrific guest cast includes returning visits by Michael J. Fox and Gary Cole.

8. The 100

Wednesday, March 11, 9/8c, The CW

9. I Hate Christian Laettner

Sunday, March 15, 9/8c, ESPN

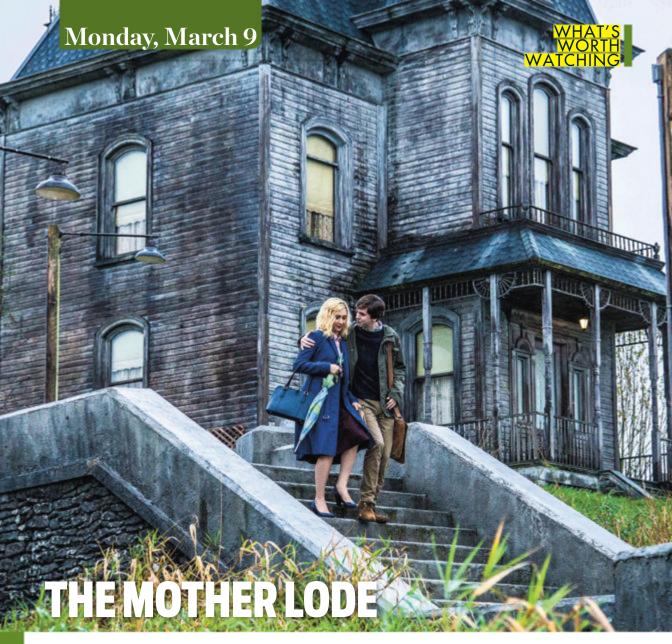

Haters gonna...well, you know. Leave it to ESPN's provocative 30 for 30 series to produce a rounded portrait of the polarizing basketball star who took Duke to four straight Final Four championships. Love or hate him, he's a fascinating figure.

10. Broadchurch

Wednesday, March 18, 10/9c BBC America

The wonderful Olivia Colman takes center stage in a gripping episode that puts a reluctant Det. Ellie Miller on the witness stand in her husband's murder trial. Though the prosecuting attorney warns her. "Don't get emotional," that's not so easy when defense counsel delves into her prickly relationship with Alec Hardy (David Tennant).

BATES MOTEL Season premiere, 9/8c, A&E

nyone who saw the chilling final moments of Bates Motel's second season can be forgiven for immediately thinking of knives and that infamous shower curtain. After remembering he murdered teacher Blaire Watson and then locking lips with his mom, Norma (Vera Farmiga), dead-eyed 18-year-old Norman Bates (Freddie Highmore) channeled his "Mother" alter ego and seemed primed to go full-on psycho. But in Season 3 of the prequel to Alfred Hitchcock's classic, Norman won't give in to the darkness without a fight, exec producer Kerry Ehrin says.

"Norman is still trying to keep the faith and be a good boy," she explains. "He wants to be able to differentiate reality from unreality; it's quite an operatic struggle."

When the series returns tonight, Norman is in a good place, happily working at the family motel while being homeschooled. He and his only friend, Emma (Olivia Cooke)—the seriously ill girl who has been crushing on him—decide to start dating. But his calm is quickly interrupted by a sexy young stranger named Annika (Revolution's Tracy Spiridakos), who checks into the motel. "Norman takes a sympathetic interest in her," Ehrin explains.

More like a creepy interest. On a typically rainy December evening outside

Vancouver, where the show is shot, Norma makes her way down the steep stairs of her forbidding Victorian home and spots her son peeping through a motel window at Annika in the shower—cue the screeching violins. Horrified, she pulls him away, hissing, "You can't be skulking around the dark peering into the guests' bathrooms! It's not normal!"

The wrongs will continue to pile up. "We're moving toward the middle of the show's arc," says Highmore, drying off during a break in filming. "Norman's descent and the story's inevitable end is in sight more than ever. After killing Ms. Watson, he realizes that he can do horrific

"Now that he has matured, it's almost as though they're husband and wife," Highmore says of Norman and Norma; "Annika [above] has secrets that affect Norman," executive producer Ehrin says.

and dangerous things. The third season is more resolving of the fact that there may be no hope for him."

And others are starting to notice. Norma's older son, Dylan (Max Thieriot), moves back home and points out that an 18-year-old sharing a bed with his mother is not exactly acceptable behavior. Dylan's disapproval yanks Norma out of her bubble. "This season she really comes to terms with the fact that Norman is homicidal," Farmiga says. "With that new awareness, their relationship becomes fragile. In confronting this darkness about her son, she'll have to depend on Dylan and Emma." And in desperation, she'll turn to professional help.

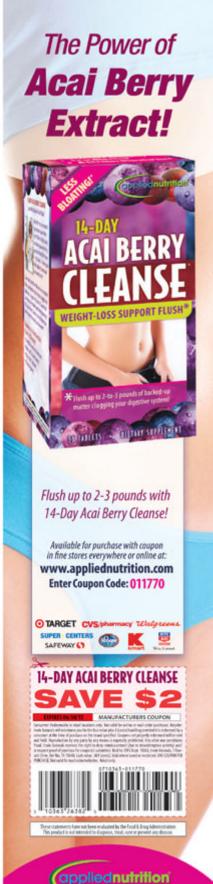

Also back: Dylan's father, Caleb (Kenny Johnson), who happens to be Norma's brother. "Dylan hates this dude," says Thieriot, "but at the same time, that's his dad." Norma is even more conflicted. "Caleb's reemergence sparks serious drama, jealousy, desperation, and desire," Farmiga says. "He really stirs things up."

As does crooked White Pine Bay Sheriff Romero (Nestor Carbonell), who wants Dylan to take over the illegal marijuana trade and who is drawn to Norma. "Romero and Norma relate passionately to each other, though not yet in a bodice-ripping way," says Farmiga. "A lot of things stand in the way of them getting together, but they're inexorably linked."

But even with all these intense relationships swirling around her, nothing can fill Norma's deep need. "The tragedy is that Norma has always wanted the peace and beauty that her terrible childhood lacked," says the Emmy-nominated Farmiga. "She's now discovering that it's actually her beloved Norman who may be standing in her way of achieving that goal. But the only way she knows how to keep him from teetering over that dark edge is to physically hold him close and to love him. It's all making her spin out a bit."

It's going to be an interesting year for Norma, Ehrin says, "because it's a combination of being able to look at the truth for the first time but then collapsing from it and facing the reality that there is something so wrong with the child you love." Particularly when that child is named Norman Bates. —lleane Rudolph

POWERS PlayStation Network

e used to be the Mick Jagger of superheroes. Now Christian Walker is just a bitter, jaded has-been. Played by Sharlto Copley in the new cop show Powers-the first original scripted series from Sony PlayStation-Walker has lost his ability to fly and is now stuck working the streets as a homicide detective. He desperately wants his old life back, along with all the money, fame, and debauchery that went with it.

"Powers goes deeper than the average superhero project by asking serious, thought-provoking questions," says Copley, who became a sci-fi sensation after starring in the Oscar-nominated District 9. "What if having a superpower is like having an addiction—something that is corrupting and hedonistically pleasurable? What if you could merchandise your powers and win lucrative endorsement deals? And what happens when—as in the case of Walker—this intense level of celebrity turns you into a selfish d--k?"

Based on the acclaimed comic book series by writer Brian Michael Bendis and artist Michael Avon Oeming, Powers is set in a world where superpowers aren't all that rare. "In fact, a lot of people have fairly mediocre or downright useless ones," Copley says. "A guy might levitate three feet off the ground or breathe a little fire or shoot lightning from his eyes...and that's it. Or you might be able to fly but you don't have invulnerability, which"-the actor notes with a laugh-"can be a real headache."

Many of these people turn to crime, and often murder, which is where Walker's firsthand knowledge of powers comes in handy. He's teamed with rookie Det. Deena Pilgrim (The Following's Susan Heyward), who has no superhuman abilities of her own but carries a different kind of baggage: Her father is a legendary law enforcer who used his position in highly questionable ways.

"Deena is out to show her dad that you can fight crime the right way, but it's not all altruism with her," Heyward says. "She Retro Girl, as fabulous at self-promotion as she is battling baddies.

"This cast is like a fantasy sports team for the gaming community," says John Koller, PlayStation's vice president of marketing. "But our goal is to reach well beyond that audience." Powers, set to stream today. will be available to all PlayStation Plus subscribers (they'll get three episodes up front, then the rest on a weekly basis), and the premiere episode will also be posted free of charge on PlayStation.com as well as YouTube. (You do not need a PlayStation console to stream the show.) DVD and Blu-ray releases will likely follow.

But don't expect any of the Marvel-style pizzazz you get at the multiplex. Though Powers is budgeted at a reported $2 million per episode, executive producer Charlie Huston says, "we will not be flipping buses in the air or have alien armies invading from other galaxies." Nor does the series give gaming fans the ability to pull a trigger or change the trajectory of a story. "But we do offer a very different kind of experience that's made with a lot of love and respect for superhero entertainment," Huston says. "This show is emotionally interactive." -Michael Logan has a very high opinion of herself. She knows that if she busts a big case, she's the girl on top." Her relationship with Walker is messy at best. "He brings out her hubris," says Heyward. "She refuses to coddle him. They're always knocking each other down a few pegs, and neither is what you'd call a hero."

On the upside, Copley says, "When Christian is at his most self-loathing, Deena can bring out his better nature. He'd prefer drinking, drugs, and groupies, of course, but she reminds him that there is honor in fighting crime."

The 10-episode series also stars Eddie Izzard (Hannibal) as Wolfe, a demonic cult leader who was once Walker's mentor; Noah Taylor (Game of Thrones) as lethal club owner Johnny Royalle; and Michelle Forbes (Orphan Black) as the wildly popular The Powers comic book debuted in 2000.

Burden on the Mount

THE 100 Season finale, 9/8c, The CW storm's a-comin'! The grim sci-fi drama The 100 closes out its second season with ruthless teenager Clarke (Eliza Taylor) battling to rescue her friends from Mount Weather, the compound where they are being held by Cage (Johnny Whitworth), the bone-marrow-harvesting leader of the Mountain Men.

"This is the episode we have been setting up all season," previews executive producer Jason Rothenberg. "The theme of this year has been 'Is there a point at which you can go too far for a just cause?' At what point do you become the bad guy?"

Some might feel that Clarke, the de facto leader of the crashed Ark's survivors, has already ventured into villainous territory, what with the mercy killing of onetime love interest Finn (Thomas McDonnell) and her role in the missile attack on a heavily populated Grounder camp—but she has certainly been back among the heroes lately. Especially now that she and a reunited band of allies are committed to freeing their loved ones without harming the innocent residents of Mount Weather. "Clarke and the others are going about it as the good guys," Rothenberg says of the rescue mission. "No civilian casualties."

But can they stick to that promise after Cage's horrifying experiments threaten to derail everything? The situation will bring Clarke "to the moral line she doesn't want to cross," Rothenberg says. Fortunately, her friend Jasper (Devon Bostick) devises a plan that could turn the tide in their favor. With the team scattered throughout the facility, though, he may not be able to get word to Clarke before it's too late.

However that all ends, life probably still won't be getting any easier for the survivors. Former Ark chancellor Jaha (Isaiah Washington) and his crew continue their search for the mythical City of Light and, according to Rothenberg, that plot takes a twist as shocking as last season's "white room" cliffhanger. "We will reveal what the City of Light is," he says. "And it's nothing at all like what anybody could imagine." Sounds dark. —Damian Holbrook

Odd Woman Out

THE ODD COUPLE 8:30/7:30c, CBS

lovenly sports-radio personality Oscar Madison (Matthew Perry) and neatnik photographer Felix Unger (Thomas Lennon) aren't the only mismatched duo on CBS's new reboot of The Odd Couple. Oscar's long-suffering assistant, Dani—a shameless busybody and hopeless romantic played by Community alum Yvette Nicole Brownis taking a thankless job and, well, making it work. Here, Brown explains why human resources can stay out of it. —Ingela Ratledge

After five seasons as Shirley on Community. you left to devote more time to your father, who is ill. How tough was that decision? I would never have left had the situation not happened. Community is the longest television job I ever had, and I love those people. I still go visit the set. I think they're like, "Yvette, cut the cord!" But my hours now on The Odd Couple are so lovely. My father is in the early stages of dementia, and every time

I get to make him breakfast and give him his pill, I'm overjoyed to be able to walk this road with him.

Looks as if you're having fun on The Odd Couple. What's Dani's secret to putting up with Oscar as a boss? She's very efficient, but she's also very opinionated. Dani is a lot sassier than an assistant would usually get away with, and Oscar takes it because he knows he's a mess in every way. Both characters are single, so occasionally I try to infuse a little hubbahubba into my comments-but I don't know if Matthew's caught on vet!

Could a hookup be on the horizon?! Oh, sure—in my fan fiction! I used to have a huge crush on Matthew Perry, and possibly still do. He's so manly! The cast eats lunch together every day, and some of us are watching our figures—so we're splitting, like, one little piece of turkey—and he's piling up his plate with pot roast, meatloaf, any hunks of flesh he can find. He's like a caveman!

STATE OF THEIR UNION

MADAM SECRETARY Sunday, 8/7c, CBS

SHE'S NOT MARRIED to Mr. Mom. Madam Secretary's Elizabeth McCord, the secretary of state played by Téa Leoni, is always snuffing out fires, whether she's in Turkey doing damage control for the CIA or (this week) trapped in Iran during a political coup. When the latter happens, it's up to Elizabeth's hubby, Henry, played by Tim Daly, to go to the White House and kick some keister. Daly gives us the top-secret intel. —Michael Logan

What's with your character, a professor of religious studies, suddenly going gangsta? He really gives it to President Dalton (Keith Carradine)! Elizabeth was sent into harm's way on a clandestine assignment without her normal security, so, yeah, Henry is freaked. But you have to remember that the McCords have been close friends with the president for years—long before he took office—so when Henry goes to him and says, "Listen, dude, do something!" it's not quite what it seems.

For a globe-hopping firebrand, Elizabeth sure gets home for dinner a lot. Is it tricky to keep the family aspect of this show believable? Whether it's a stretch or not, I don't care. It's the best thing about Madam Secretary. We're inundated these days with shows that are chock-full of political intrigue and conspiracy, plots so complicated that I can't keep track of all the ins and outs. It's refreshing to see two people juggling marriage, kids, and a healthy sex life, and we still get a world crisis solved every week in 42 minutes. That's a relief to our viewers, because I don't think there's anyone out there right now who thinks Washington, D.C., is functioning well.

Why are there so few happy couples on screen? People would rather make Gone Girl. We've become so accustomed to lying and cheating and other kinds of horrible behavior. I'm so happy our show won't go in that direction. Even when Elizabeth and Henry fight—and they do fight hard—they stay on point. They don't play dirty and throw in other issues that have been festering. Their battles are actually aspirational. It's been reported that you and Téa Leoni have a real-life romance going. What can you say about that? It's really sweet that people are interested, but I've found that my best bet, when it comes to anything working out in my personal life, is to just not talk about it. [Laughs] But hey, thanks for asking!

Hate Watching

30 FOR 30: I HATE CHRISTIAN LAETTNER Sunday, 9/8c, ESPN

ot everyone hates Christian Laettner. Duke fans, for instance. But in a Grantland.com contest two years ago, college basketball fans chose him as the most hated player of the past three decades.

When ESPN asked director Rory Karpf to examine "hate in sports" as part of its 30 for 30 series, he zeroed in on Laettner and the loathing that followed him through college, the Olympics, and the NBA. Karpf told Laettner the film "wasn't a love letter, but that we would be fair." However, Karpf admits, "I didn't approach him right away saying, 'Hey, we want to make a film called I Hate Christian Laettner." Once he heard the title. Laettner was OK with it but feared his family would be upset. "I had to smooth things over with his mom and his sister," Karpf says.

Laettner was already disliked for his prettyboy looks and confidence-some called it arrogance—when Duke met Kentucky in the 1992 NCAA East Regional final. He earned more enmity by tapping his foot on the chest of a fallen Kentucky player. And then there was "the Shot," his buzzer beater that sent Duke to the Final Four.

The Blue Devils went to four straight Final Fours with Laettner, winning the national title in 1991 and 1992. "He came to represent what people don't like about Duke in general," Karpf says. "If he was at Kentucky or North Carolina,

"If I went back and did it all again," Laettner says in the film, "I wouldn't change a thing."

I don't know if people would feel that way. He would just be like another good player."

The 90-minute film (narrated by Rob Lowe) examines what Karpf calls "the five levels of Laettner hate," often pitting perception versus reality in the areas of privilege (Laettner was from a working-class family and attended prep school on a scholarship), race, being a bully, greatness, and looks.

Karpf says Laettner didn't wince when he was called a villain in the film. "He's embraced that role," Karpf says. After all, even in a competition to be named most hated college basketball player, Laettner still came out on top. -Karen Rosen

Lord of the Dance

DANCING WITH THE STARS Season premiere, 8/7c, ABC

TEN YEARS. TWO hundred twenty-three celebrities. Countless sequins. It's the 10th anniversary of the glitter dome known as Dancing With the Stars when Season 20 kicks off tonight, featuring Patti LaBelle, Michael Sam, Suzanne Somers, and Rumer Willis. Since the summer of 2005, no one's had a better vantage point for the spray-tanned extravaganza than Emmywinning host Tom Bergeron. Here, he reflects on a decade of dance. —Deborah Starr Seibel

Does it feel like 10 years? No, not at all. Honestly, when the show was first proposed, I said, "Let's see if we can get through the first six weeks." ABC's former executive vice president Andrea Wong was the reason it got on the air. She told me that when she was first pitching it, she could see people avoid eye contact, convinced it was going to be a disaster. Head judge Len Goodman is leaving after this season. Are you worried about the impact that will have on the show? Knowing how persuasive [new executive producer] Rob Wade is, I would put an asterisk next to that. I'm hoping Len can be talked into doing what he did this past fall: He took five to six weeks off and we booked guest judges or just stayed with the three other judges. I would hate to lose him completely, because I missed him terribly when he was gone before. And it just felt like some of the heart [of the show] was gone.

Do the contestants ever come to you and say, "I knew it was going to be difficult, but I had no idea it would be this hard"? I remember when Tommy Chong made it into the semifinals [last season].

We broke for a commercial, and I went up to congratulate him. He looked at me and said, "In jail for another week." His body was just telling him to stop—as much as we loved having him there and he loved the experience. His knees were experience. His knees were hurting, his hip was hurting, everything was killing him.

Is the most dramatic moment of the series when Marie Osmond fainted after her performance in Season 5? Yes, it really is. There's nothing that currently trumps having somebody just collapse next to you and not being sure if they're passed out or if they've dropped dead!

Chasing Life 9/8c, ABC Family

Between April's stress of having to wow her new editorin-chief and competing with Danny for big stories, now is probably the worst possible time for Dominic and Natalie to reveal their secret relationship.

The Following 9/8c, Fox

Reeling from the loss of one of their own, Hardy and the team set out to find the person responsible—and the search could lead to a literal dead end.

Jane the Virgin Guest star alert

9/8c, The CW With Jane and baby daddy Rafael growing further apart, she decides to sign up for a romance-writing workshop at ex Michael's suggestion. Jane Seymour guests as her over-the-top instructor.

Castle 10/9c, ABC Castle and Beckett partner on a murder case with a powerhouse detective from Hong Kong, but Beckett isn't sure what's more mysterious: the case or their new colleague's motives.

The Night Shift 10/9c, NBC

Things go from bad to worse for TC, Topher, and Ragosa after relatives of a janitor who's been electrocuted on the job begin to develop their own unusual symptoms.

Unwrapped 2.0 10/9c, Cooking Network An entire episode about nuts is nuts, right? Get ready to be as surprised as host Alfonso Ribeiro is when he examines the countless ways these crunchy fruits—yes, fruits—can make sweet treats.

SHE'S BACK! HAPPY Endings' Elisha Cuthbert returns to TV in the new Ellen DeGeneresproduced rom-com One Big Happy, in which she plays a lesbian named Lizzy whose plan to have a baby with best bud Luke (Nick Zano) gets derailed by his quickie marriage to Brit bombshell Prudence (Kelly Brook). Here, Cuthbert explains why this is One to watch. - Damian Holbrook

Nick Zano had a recurring role on Happy Endings, and now you guys are together again. I know! He was actually the one who called me about this project, and I don't think I would have done it if it wasn't for him. As much as I loved the premise, I'd never done a comedy in front of a live studio audience before. I didn't know if I had the guts for it. And he was like, "Elisha, if you can handle Happy Endings, you can handle this." So how different is it? With Happy Endings, the process was working really long hours, Monday through Friday. Here, you come in Monday to Thursday and rehearse and get home by 2 in the afternoon! It's brilliant in that way. But come Friday, it is the craziest day of your life! You get up at 8am, and the next thing you know, you're in front of 250 people doing an entire episode. I thought the butterflies would subside after a couple of episodes, but it's still been terrifying after shooting six!

Your Happy Endings character once pretended to be a lesbian and used Ellen as inspiration. Now you're working for her! Did she see that bit? I tried to [keep] her from seeing it! Then someone brought it up during [a press conference] while I was sitting right next to her.

And? She was like, "Get up and do it! I want to see it." I could feel my heartbeat in my face. Obviously, she has a great sense of humor, so I think she was slightly flatteredand slightly offended.

What's it been like working with her? It's been wonderful. The only tricky thing: She came to a taping and warmed up the audience beforehand—and we had to follow her! No pressure. She's so good, and then they're left with us! [Laughs]

EMPIRE STATE OF MIND

EMPIRE Season finale, 8/7c, Fox stand on its own."

ee Daniels hates Wednesday nights. That's when the watercooler crowd is jacked up to see the latest installment of his sizzling hip-hop soap opera, Empire, the record-smashing, rule-busting hit of the 2014–15 television season. But Daniels just can't join the party.

"I have never worried so much in my life as I do when I go to bed after Empire airs, because that means the ratings will be out the next morning," says the Oscarnominated Daniels, who cocreated the Fox series with Danny Strong (the two teamed on the 2013 feature film Lee Daniels' The Butler). "The excitement for our show is high, but so are the expectations. My publicist will kill me for saying this, but all I can think about is that old showbiz saying 'The higher you rise, the harder you fall!'"

Relax, boss. Empire, starring Terrence Howard and Taraji P. Henson as rap moguls (and battling exes) Lucious and Cookie Lyon, is showing no signs of decline. In fact, since the show's January 7 debut, the ratings have gone up each week—an achievement no other series can claim since Nielsen started tracking that metric 23 years ago. The show averages 11.6 million viewers a week, and that number jumps to 15.2 million with a week of DVR playback. In the advertisercoveted 18-49 group, it is bested only by The Walking Dead and The Big Bang Theory. Even when the numbers eventually level off, it will remain a behemoth.

"I knew we had a show with great energy and potential, especially with Terrence and Taraji pulling out all their

"I love that Lucious is not looking for anyone's approval." —Terrence Howard superpowers, but we tried to be realistic," Strong says. "We were told that getting a 2 rating in the key demo would make us a success and that anything in the high 2s would qualify as a hit, so that's what we were hoping for. No one was prepared for us to hit a 5." The challenge now, he adds, "is to give our audience a killer season finale—one that tops anything they're expecting and guarantees they'll be back."

That two-hour episode, which airs tonight, is directed by Mario Van Peebles and Debbie Allen and boasts a musical blowout with dueling Lyon brothers Jamal (Jussie Smollett) and Hakeem (Bryshere Gray). "Make sure you have a doctor on call, because you will be in cardiac arrest," Smollett says. "By the finale, it's official that both brothers are industry superstars, and Debbie has staged the biggest, most lavish numbers the boys have ever done. And I get to duet with Patti LaBelle. It does not get better."

Daniels is also predicting a visceral reaction to his season ender, "Your mouth will hang open," he says, "and you will feel gutted."

And maybe even morally confused. Howard says the episode will feature "someone getting their just deserts for doing something really bad, and you will either applaud it wildly or wish that this person had gotten away with it. It all depends on your ethics." Hmmm...could Howard be referring to his own character? Lucious killed old friend Bunkie (Antoine McKay) in the series premiere and never got caught, although the police have been hot on his trail ever since. "Between Lucious committing murder and being diagnosed with ALS with only three years to live, the producers have made damn sure I don't act up on the set," Howard says with a laugh. "And it's working. I show up on time with > all my lines memorized, and I always hit my marks because, hell—they can get rid of me in a heartbeat!" Howard savs that he had no problem playing one of Empire's most controversial and brutal sequences—a flashback showing Lucious shoving a young Jamal into a garbage can when the boy started to exhibit gay tendencies. "I love that Lucious is honest with his feelings and not looking for anybody's approval," Howard says. "My own daddy was a monster when he was home, and he would whoop my ass good, but he was also the best man I've ever known. People are not black and white."

Smollett, on the other hand, is cringing over his character's recent behavior, especially the moment when Jamal was asked by a reporter if he had a girlfriend. Not only did he refuse to acknowledge he had a live-in lover, Michael (Rafael de la Fuente), but he made things even worse by saying that there was "no one special" in his life.

"That was such a d--k move," Smollett says, "and I feel extra heartbroken about it because I ad-libbed that line!" Michael rightly took a hike over the slight. Is there any chance for these two, now that Jamal has finally come out publicly? "I sure hope so, but it's up to Jamal to straighten up," Smollett says. "He started out a normal guv who didn't want success to change him, and that's exactly what happened-in record time. But I can relate. It's something all of us at Empire are dealing with right now, and it's hard. Fame is just not normal!" - Michael Logan

Size Matters

t'll be a tall order for anyone to topple Kentucky in the 2015 NCAA basketball tournament, "Their size is something that really jumps out at you," CBS analyst Bill Raftery says. Willie Cauley-Stein and Dakari Johnson are 7-footers, with Karl-Anthony Towns standing at 6'11" and Trey Lyles at 6'10". Texas-Arlington coach Scott Cross, whose team lost to Kentucky 92-44 in November, said of the Wildcats' size, "We could have guys standing on chairs and not even simulate it."

Kentucky, which lost to Connecticut in last year's NCAA title game but was undefeated this season and ranked No. 1 at press time, is among the nation's top teams in fewest points allowed and most blocks. "Defensively they're as good as anybody we've seen-you just don't get easy shots against them," Raftery says. "And they can score. They've got Devin Booker, who is a great shooter, and Aaron Harrison."

The only numbers that the Wildcats are intentionally keeping low are minutes played. Coach John Calipari has used a two-platoon system—substituting groups of playersbecause his bench is so deep. Cauley-Stein was averaging 25 minutes a game. "If he were with another [team], he'd be getting 37 minutes," Raftery says. However, he adds, "There's no comedown in the talent level when they sub."

Raftery, who joins the television broadcast of the Final Four for the first time after working the past 23 as a radio analyst, calls Gonzaga "the one team that would be a fun matchup with Kentucky because they have size too."

Wisconsin, which lost to Kentucky 74-73 in last year's Final Four, has its own big man in senior forward Frank Kaminsky. He leads the Badgers in scoring and rebounding and, Raftery marvels, "he shoots outside at 7 feet tall." Virginia, Duke, Villanova, and Arizona could also emerge from March Madness to spend April in Indianapolis. (For the first time, TBS will air the national semifinals on Saturday, April 4, while CBS once again has the national championship game two days later.)

"It's interesting to me this year because many teams are even," Raftery says. But some stand taller than the rest. -Karen Rosen

ROMAN HOLIDAY

ALLEGIANCE 10/9c, NBC

ALLEGIANCE PUTS THE "international" in "international spy thriller" by heading to Rome tonight. "We're trying for a level of realism that you can't get unless you go out into the real world," says executive producer George Nolfi of the weeklong shoot in the Eternal City. Of course, rookie CIA analyst Alex O'Connor (Gavin Stenhouse), in Italy with his boss, Sam (Kenneth Choi), and foxy FBI counterpart, Michelle (Floriana Lima), won't exactly be sightseeing now that he's joined his parents in secretly moonlighting for Russian espionage unit SVR.

The dangerous trail will lead to intel about Black Dagger-the planned attack on American infrastructure—as well as a new baddie, terrorist gunfor-hire Oskar Christoph (Giancarlo Esposito), "He's going to be the key to the rest of the season," Nolfi says. "When people see him, it's going to be like, 'Oh my God." —Ingela Ratledge

GLEE'S GREAT PERFORMANCES

GLEE Series finale, Friday, 8/7c, Fox

fter six seasons and just as many covers of "Don't Stop Believin'," New Directions is taking one last bow. In honor of Glee's final curtain call, we offer a round of applause to these standout musical moments. —Damian Holbrook

"Don't Rain on My Parade" (from "Sectionals," Season 1): We knew Rachel Berry was a powerhouse from the pilot, but nobody was ready for Lea Michele's astounding, seemingly effortless midseason performance of the Funny Girl staple.

"Teenage Dream" ("Never Been Kissed," Season 2): All it took was a little Katy Perry and some Darren Criss—fronted Warbler action to perfectly set up the "Klaine" (Kurt and Blaine) romance we're still swooning over.

"The Edge of Glory" ("Nationals," Season 3): Amber Riley's Mercedes always brings it, and we're pretty sure her work with the all-girl Troubletones on Lady Gaga's rocker helped New Directions take the win at Nationals.

"Problem" ("Homecoming," Season 6): Brittany (Heather Morris), Santana (Naya Rivera), and Quinn (Dianna Agron)—the Unholy Trinity—worked Ariana Grande's hit into a steamy, hip-swingin' Cheerios routine we can't stop rewatching.

"Chasing Pavements" ("The New Rachel," Season 4): Melissa Benoist and the "new class" may have been abruptly expelled midway through last season, but at least we got her Marley Rose raising McKinley's roof with this Adele ditty.

"Like a Prayer" ("The Power of Madonna," Season 1): Of the often-uneven theme shows, the Madonna tribute hour takes top honors, building to this joyous cover featuring Jonathan Groff as Vocal Adrenaline's Jesse St. James.

"I Want to Hold Your Hand" ("Grilled Cheesus," Season 2): If Chris Colfer didn't reduce you to tears when his Kurt serenaded his comatose dad with this Beatles gem, you too may be in a coma.

"Like a Prayer" "Don't Rain on Mv Parade' Teenage Dream"

"For Once in My Life" ("Wonder-ful," Season 4): Kevin McHale's Artie was always the sunniest, most soulful New Directioner, so it's fitting that he absolutely shone brightly on Stevie Wonder's ebullient ode to love.

Make You Feel My Love ("The Quarter-back," Season 5): So gorgeous yet so hard to watch, Bob Dylan's classic was as much Rachel's heartbreaking good-bye to Finn as it was Michele's to late love Cory Monteith.

THE INVINCIBLES

CHAMPIONSHIP First round begins Friday, noon/11am c, ESPN2

AS MARCH MADNESS begins, you'd have to be insane to bet against the University of Connecticut women's basketball team. Since an anomalous loss to Stanford back in November. the Huskies have been the most dominant team in the country, outscoring opponents by a monstrous average of more than 40 points per game (including an 87-62 thrashing of then-top-ranked South Carolina in February). "What makes them special is that they are the best team on offense and defense," ESPN studio analyst Kara Lawson says of the two-time defending NCAA champions. "They have great balance, multiple players who [can] lead them in scoring, and threats at every single position. Every player on the floor can go for 25 points."

The list of potential challengers is short, including South Carolina, Baylor, Maryland, and the team Lawson believes has the best chance-however slim—to pull an upset. Notre Dame. last year's runner-up. "This is what women's college basketball has become." Lawson says. "Instead of who can win the national championship, the question is, who can beat the University of Connecticut?" -Rich Sands

BY LISA SCHWARZBAUM

illiam Shakespeare set his rambling, multi-strand history/legend/ romance/tragedy in an ancient Britain under Roman rule. In this cool and inventive adaptation of the Bard's late-period play, filmmaker Michael Almereyda modernizes the action, turning the King Cymbeline of the title into the king of a biker gang and letting Ed Harris loose to roar in the role. As Cymbeline's daughter and only heir, Imogen, Dakota Johnson trades her Fifty Shades of Grey sexuality for a fetching purity in her fidelity to her young husband, Posthumus (Penn Badgley). Woe, oh woe, their secret marriage upsets the king, not least because hubby is poor, with no prospects, and thus the fellow is banished; the union also messes with the agenda of Cymbeline's Queen (Milla Jovovich), who had planned to marry off Imogen to a son by her first marriage (Anton Yelchin). There's more plot, anon.

Cymbeline reunites Ethan Hawke with Almereyda some 15 years after they collaborated on an updated Hamlet. And as his Oscar-nominated work in Boyhood proved, middle-aged, been-around-the-block maturity becomes Hawke, here in his role as lachimo, an up-to-no-goodnik who bets Posthumus that he can seduce Imogen and prove her infidelity.

The movie's gorgeous, noirish look is the work of the superb cinematographer (and longtime David Gordon Green collaborator) Tim Orr. And the vibe of the whole production is so groovy that the experience almost—almost—compensates for the source material's inherent ungainliness. With all due respect to the Bard, this is one royal welter of a play. ***

Growing Up and Other Lies

With one of their quartet about to move to Ohio to help out in his father's business, four buddies, all pushing 30, walk the length of Manhattan on a farewell tour of...I'm not sure exactly, but I think it's feckless stupidity, presented as a shambling comedy of arrested male development. Nice shots of NYC, thoughand sharp, funny work by The Daily Show's Wyatt Cenac as the one in the bunch who knows enough to be mortified by the company he keeps. ★★☆☆☆

Tracers

93 mins., PG-13, March 20

In one corner of this satisfying action feature, inevitable romantic attraction develops between a debt-ridden bike messenger (Taylor Lautner) and an acrobatically mysterious beauty (Marie Avgeropoulos) who runs—and runs—with a fleet crew of street-tough heist pros. In another corner, a complicated, formulaic plot unspools involving gangs and gangsters. In between is the real movie: the kinetic beauty of parkour, captured in tremendously enjoyable high-speed sequences that, once again, draw energy from the photogenic beauty of everyday New York City landscapes. ★★★☆☆

He was the ultimate in Zen cool, no matter how high Gordon Ramsay turned up the heat. MasterChef Junior Season 3 winner Nathan Odom creamed the competition February 24 with his roasted fennel gratin, herb-crusted lamb chop, and Earl Grey tea tart and took home the $100,000 grand prize. Now what? BY MICHAEL LOGAN

You're 13. What will you do with all that dough? We don't have much money in my family, so it's going to help a lot. And some will go to Mama's Kitchen, this really wonderful charity where I live [San Diego] that feeds people with AIDS and cancer. Also, I do work in my neighborhood, like clean houses, to earn money for kitchen equipment. Now I can buy what I need, because my goal is to go to culinary school.

And eventually open a restaurant? No! That's too much pressure. I learned a lot being on MasterChef, including that the restaurant business is not for me. I have something much more chill in mind, like maybe a pastry shop. Well, don't forget to hit up Ramsay. He loved your banana-caramel macaroons so much he said he'd sell them in his threestar Michelin restaurant. America is vour witness! Those weren't even my best. I've made them at home so much better, but I think the judges appreciated the risk. Up till then I was quiet and under the radar and playing it safe. I'm pretty shy and not good at talking with other kids, so it was nice to meet so many with the same crazy passion to cook. That show really brought me out of my shell.

There was one episode when Ramsay got a little too Hell's Kitchen on you guys. Is that appropriate for ones so young? Getting eliminated is much harder than getting yelled at. There was a lot of crying this season when kids had to leave because everybody loved it so much. We didn't do this show for the reasons adults do, like to get a career in the food world. Kids just want to have fun.

You filmed MasterChef nearly a year ago. Was it hard keeping your win a secret all this time? When people would ask how I did in the competition, my default answer was always, "You'll just have to watch to find out." But then they'd try to study my eyes and get a hint. I found out I'm not just good in the kitchen. I'm also good at poker face. [Laughs]

HOROSCOPE

BY THE ASTROTWINS, TALI AND OPHIRA EDUT

Pisces (Feb. 20–March 20)

A huge, new opportunity is coming your way with the Pisces solar eclipse on March 20. Don't resist change—it will happen fast. This is your ticket out of a situation that you're ready to leave behind. IF YOUR BIRTHDAY IS IN THE NEXT TWO WEEKS: Scope out that office space. Career will be a huge focus in the coming year. You might start over in a new field or return to a job from your past. No coasting allowed! Hard work is required, but you'll see major growth.

Aries (March 21–April 20) ROBIN WRIGHT 4/8/1966

As an independent Aries, you're more comfortable in charge. But when someone older and wiser steps forward with an assist, put your pride to the side and accept the help. This could launch a personal dream into flight!

Taurus (April 21-May 21) JONATHAN JACKSON 5/11/1982

Just friends? Maybe not. A platonic relationship could hit a romantic stride or you could have a chance to be your sweetie's BFF and main cheerleader. You might have to deal with a jealous person's antics, though.

Gemini (May 22-June 21) ARCHIE PANJABI 5/31/1972

Success hinges upon building great relationships. Spend the next two weeks strengthening your professional connections. Be on the lookout for upstarts who can accompany you on your quest to achieve your goals.

Cancer (June 22-July 23) KIRSTEN VANGSNESS 7/7/1972

Don't miss out on an exciting travel opportunity. Exploring new territory could spur some business ideas. You might even team up with some of the people you meet along your journey.

Leo (July 24-Aug. 23) MATT LEBLANC 7/25/1967

Signed, sealed, delivered. Don't be surprised if you suddenly crave more certainty about what the future holds. In business and pleasure, find out where people stand. Let go of a lukewarm friendship.

Virgo (Aug. 24–Sept. 23) MAX GREENFIELD 9/4/1980

Put a ring on it...or maybe some ink. Partnerships become permanent over the coming two weeks. Presently unattached? On the 20th, a solar eclipse illuminates a hot prospect who could become the Fitz to your Olivia.

Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) JANE KRAKOWSKI 10/11/1968

Think before you blurt or tweet. Private matters should be handled without input from mere acquaintances. After the 20th, a relationship could become stronger and more exclusive than before.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) JOSH DUHAMEL 11/14/1972

You're ready to meet your match—or to have more fun with the love of your life. Plan some playdates—and some gym dates. Spring training officially begins when the sun enters your wellness zone on the 21st.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) KATHERINE HEIGL 11/24/1978

Spring cleaning gives way to spring fever over the next two weeks. Summon your inner design star. On the 14th, Saturn takes a three-month backspin through your sign. Prioritize yourself over handling everyone else's drama.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) BETH BEHRS 12/26/1985

Boundaries! That same old issue flares up again, but this time resolve to deal with it differently. Set clear limits. A simple "no" is better than hemming and hawing in an attempt to avoid hurting someone's feelings.

Aguarius (Jan. 21-Feb. 19) OPRAH WINFREY 1/29/1954

Your new buzzword: monetize. Map out your ideas and you could boast your own empire this spring. A solar eclipse on the 20th could bring a new job or prompt you to start your own business. Take advantage!

What: The WJM-TV team signs off in LOVE WAS ALL around for The Mary Tyler Moore Show the night its highly anticipated last episode aired. This finale had everything, including guest stars (Valerie Harper and Cloris Leachman, returning from their respective spinoffs, Rhoda and Phyllis), an emotional send-off (the now-classic group hug and a bittersweet rendition of "It's a Long Way to Tipperary"), and a triumphant curtain call. And, of course, one last comedic twist. When WJM-TV's new owner wanted to make big changes, instead of firing nincompoop anchor Ted Baxter (Ted Knight), he canned the rest of the staff: Mary (Mary Tyler Moore), Lou (Ed Asner), Murray (Gavin MacLeod), and even Happy Homemaker Sue Ann Nivens (Betty White). Everyone-the fictional characters and the real-life cast, which also included Georgia Engel as Georgette-knew the end was coming, but that didn't make things any easier.

Allan Burns (cocreator): Mary was the last one who signed on to the idea of shutting the series down, because she loved the process, the show itself, the cast, and the staff. It was harder for her than anyone.

Harper: It was Cloris Leachman who called [cocreator] James L. Brooks and Allan Burns and said, "We'd really like to be on the last Mary. We know you're doing it at the office, but the apartment girls would like to be written in." So they did. Asner: During rehearsal, we went into the group hug, and Jim Brooks said, "Now, is there a funny way that we can get out of this and maybe not necessarily break up the hug?" Fortunately, Georgia said, "Well, there's Kleenex on the desk; we can go for the Kleenex." So we all moved over like a centipede to get the Kleenex.

Jay Sandrich (director): We were doing the lines in rehearsal with not a lot of feeling, just to know what they were. But when Ed read the line "I treasure you people" so beautifully, it just got us all. And I remember telling Mary she should hold off tears as long as she could.

Burns: [On the night of the shoot,] Mary was really disciplined, and she made herself get through this. And we were holding our breath the whole time. MacLeod: All our family members were there. And Mary's mom and dad were always there, every Friday night. I think Dick Cavett could have been there. He used to come a lot.

Sandrich: When the [characters] walked out the door and Mary turned the light off, the man backstage who turned the studio light off was so in tears, he forgot! [Laughs] And when the scene was over, tears were running down everybody's face.

MacLeod: The audience was weeping. They didn't want this group of people to not be together anymore.

Burns: I can't remember whose idea it was to include a televised curtain call at the end, but it seemed only appropriate that we should recognize what all these people meant to each other and to the audience. It broke the fourth wall, but what the hell, where were we gonna go from there?
